DR. BARKER TEACHES AN IMPORTANT LESSON IN AN ENTERTAINING WAY

Students and Women at High School Learn in a New and Forceful Manner How Essential to Success and Happiness are a Sound Body, a Clear Head and a Strong Heart.

On Wednesday, 550 or more high school boys and girls learned "How to Make the Most of Life," from Dr. Charles E. Barker, or if they did not it was their own fault. What's more some seven or eight hundred mothers learned about "The Mother's Relation to her Daughter," as she probably had never thought of it before.

Dr. Barker is a man who might well be called a "minister of common sense." His first talk was of non-sensational lecture delivered by one who is so proud of his own convictions that he thinks no reasons except his own word necessary, but a heart to heart talk with the boys and girls, with illustrations that brought his statements to the point.

The points upon which Dr. Barker based his talk were statements contained in an address of James A. Garfield, former president of the United States. The three statements were, that in order to be a success, one must have three things, first, a strong arm, second, a clear head, and third, a strong heart. Mr. Barker assured the audience that the first impression as to the meaning of these words was sure to be wrong. He then set about to discuss the meaning of them. The "strong arm" referred to is not an arm of the hardest muscle; it is more than a mere muscle. It means a sound and healthy body. If a man is to succeed, he must have a body that will not fail him, one that will carry him through his daily tasks well. There are many people who have been failures through the lack of a good sound body. There are others who have been failures because they lacked the energy necessary to succeed. The statement that one cannot succeed because he is sickly is untrue if he really wants that as set for a healthy body can be made as well as it can be a gift of nature. Perhaps the most energetic man the United States has ever known was Theodore Roosevelt. The speaker said that he had heard how the great man was sickly in his younger days, but could not believe it as he had always appeared so energetic. One day Dr. Barker was talking to the late statesman's sister, and he inquired as to the truth of the report. The sister replied that "Teddy" as a boy was exceptionally frail. She then explained to Dr. Barker how "Teddy" built up the wonderful constitution that helped him so immensely in the great work he had accomplished. Their family doctor told him that if he would take twenty minutes of exercise every morning when he got out of bed, by the time he was twenty a body as healthy as his would be his as anyone. From that time on, he exercised for twenty-five minutes every morning, and at the age of nineteen entered Harvard, passing the finest physical examination possible. His excellent condition being due to these morning exercises which he took so faithfully for five years. He did not, however, stop then, but continued to train the body and build up the energy for which he is so well known today. Dr. Barker said that if these boys would take fifteen minutes of such exercises each morning, they too would possess a body as energetic and dependable as the veritable iron man.

The second qualification, a level head, is the aim of all the educational institutions in this country. Most students, and many other people have a mistaken conception of education. They think it is learning all the books have to say and that is all. Many men who are graduates of colleges are failures today because they lack education. The definition of education as given by Thomas Huxley gives the true meaning of education and its aim: "The chief purpose of an education is to train the mind and the will to do the work you have to do in the world when it ought to be done, whether or not you want to do it." The cause of failure in business or a profession is lack of will power to make one's self do the thing he should do, rather than the thing he wants to do. Failure in school is a result of the same thing. Dr. Barker was once a student himself and he knows just about the way the average student prepares a lesson. He illustrated the way a girl studied, study for a few minutes, then stop to look in the mirror for a while, study for a few more minutes, then stop to dream of some Adonis of the screen. The boy at his lessons, after fondly blessing his teacher for the extra long lesson, he settles down for a few minutes to actual study, then a thought of a football game comes into his mind, and so on until the lesson is half prepared or thrown aside. What is the result of such studying? After a few years the brain becomes used to wandering. It is actually trained to wander from its work, and when the person goes into business or to his profession, he cannot hold himself to the task he has before him; and the result is another piece of junk for the scrap heap. Men have failed in their business for just that reason, because they did not train their minds as they should have when they were at school, the reason in most cases being that they were not warned. The boys and girls of K. H. S. will have no such excuse if they are failures, for they have now been warned. The student must accomplish the art of doing his task properly, permitting nothing else to come into his mind when he is at work on it. This cannot be done in a few days; it requires many weeks of trying and exercising of the will; but it can be done, and if these pupils will now begin to study with a serious attempt, to do their work and nothing else, within six months of now, sticking to a task will be an easy thing. Dreaming should be a part of every young person's life. A person without dreams of his future is almost worthless; but that dreaming must be done when it is the proper time, and not when a task is to be done.

A brave heart, the third condition necessary to success, is the hardest thing of all to attain. Braving fire to rescue some victim, answering the call of one's country in time of need, and like deeds are acts of courage; but there are men who have faced the fiercest of physical dangers who are actual cowards. The hardest thing for a person to do is to resist temptation. One young man, wearing the Croix de Guerre and the American medal for bravery in action, who faced a nest of German machine guns single handed, was deliberately called a coward by the speaker. Why? Dr. Barker met him in Des Moines, Iowa, in the lobby of the hotel, when the war hero was in a drunken state. The service man apologized for his condition; he was ashamed of himself, not because he was intoxicated, but because he had broken his word to his mother not to touch liquor. He had intended to keep the promise, but when several of his friends urged him, he yielded. His yielding to something which he did not want to do, made him a coward. A coward to face the ridicule of others, to keep his word to his mother, that is the courage that is to be avoided. There are cowards of such type everywhere; they are far more common than the men who are afraid to risk their lives. The man who can face temptation without yielding is the man with the brave heart. The only way to cultivate a brave heart is to say "No," and to say it emphatically whenever urged to do something you should not do.

Dr. Barker then commented on the lack of respect shown by the young men and young ladies of today toward each other. He gave an illustration which conveys the message better than anything else. A couple years ago, a friend of his was walking along the banks of the Niagara river near the falls, when he saw a large flock of swans flying overhead. The birds descended and started to swim in the swiftly flowing stream; they were rapidly followed by a few of them again took to the air; the rest stayed in the water, flapping about in the water, having a wonderful time; they were carried nearer and nearer to the falls, and when at the very edge, all tried to escape danger just ahead; but they could not, for the suction of the mass of water was too great for them to overcome; over they went, and the observers of their fate went down to the bottom of the falls where they found the birds' limp and mangled bodies. A lifeless mass, the birds who drifted along, enjoying the excitement while it lasted, trusting themselves to be able to escape when it was time; thinking they knew when to stop!

The conclusion of the address was a part of Robert W. Service's poem, "The Reckoning." Gayety is fine, pleasure is wonderful, but both must be paid for and paid in full. The talk to mothers and high school girls occurred in a room packed to the doors when Mrs. G. F. Rice, president of the Federation of Women's Clubs introduced Dr. Barker to the assembly. In this talk Dr. Barker addressed both the students and the older women as the mothers of unborn children, and showed them their responsibility to those children in just as telling a manner as he had talked to the boys and girls an hour earlier. Again physical health was shown plainly to be a necessity for every successful woman and for those children yet unborn. This time Dr. Barker showed just what exercises to take to make a woman well and strong. And then the speaker took his courage in both hands and told the women, right in the face of the girls that the first duty of every mother to her child, whether boy or girl was to teach them obedience to law in the home, and he was tremendously emphatic about it.

Finally Dr. Barker showed the responsibility of every mother to answer her daughter when about five or six years old, when she wanted to know how she came into this world, a perfectly proper question. But the speaker did not leave the matter there, as usually happens. He told the mothers, exquisitely how to talk to the children and in such a way that the talk might with perfect propriety and lack of embarrassment have been delivered before any audience. It was perfectly done, its influence for good on all who heard it was quite beyond measure.

In the evening Dr. Barker spoke to a large audience of men.

The returns tabulated up to 2 o'clock showed the following elected:

Tories—230.
Labourites—88.

London, Nov. 16.—F. W. Dimbleby, organizer of Lloyd-George's campaign, declared this afternoon that the former premier was becoming disheartened. He was disappointed at the poor showing made by some of his candidates.

"But Mr. Lloyd-George is still full of fight," said Dimbleby. "He will not admit defeat. He will keep up the struggle for his ideals if he has to do so singlehanded."

Arthur Henderson, Laborite and former minister, was defeated at Widnes by Dr. Clayton, his Tory opponent.

London, Nov. 16.—Return of a reactionary conservative government in Great Britain with Legislative powers transferred from the House of Commons to the House of Lords, is the greatest blow to progress we have received in 200 years.

If it had not been for the unhappy errors of labor and the grossly unscrupulous misrepresentations of labor's policy by all the opposing parties, the labor party would have swept the country from end to end.

TWO SENTENCED IN COUNTY COURT

John Collins Charged Plea to Guilty and Gets Minimum of One Year—Cousins Must Serve at Least Two and a Half Years.

County court convened this morning when it was intended to take up the case of The People vs. John Collins but when court convened Thomas Coughlin, attorney for defendant, announced that defendant desired to change his plea of not guilty to guilty to the crime charged, that of grand larceny, second degree. In entering the plea of guilty his attorney asked that mercy be shown as Collins had made restitution to the full amount.

Collins who was captain of a barge of the Hudson River Freight Company which operates barges between New York and Albany, is alleged to have sold 20 bags of sugar to the captain of a "bum boat" who disposed of a part of the sugar which was sold in Kingston. When the barge arrived in Albany it was found that 38 bags of sugar valued at about $7 a bag was missing.

The owners of the barge entered a complaint and the matter was traced back to the selling of the 20 bags of sugar to the "bum boat" captain. Collins was indicted by the grand jury. The sentence of the court was an indeterminate term in the Clinton State Prison at Dannemora for a period of not less than 1 year or more than 3 years.

William Cousins, colored, who pleaded guilty to robbery Monday afternoon, was sentenced this morning. Cousins had engaged in a game of cards on one of the brickyards along the river and lost his money. He borrowed some money and lost this too. He left the shack where the game was going on and returned to hold up the game and recover the money present of their money. The twenty men present handed over their money and Cousins and his companion were trying to make good their escape. Cousins was hit in the leg. He was captured and after being treated at the hospital was brought to jail where he has been for several weeks.

Cousins when arraigned entered a plea of not guilty to the charge of robbery, first degree, but later changed his plea to guilty to robbery, second degree. Roscoe Ellsworth appeared for defendant. The sentence of the court was that the defendant be confined to the Clinton State Prison at Dannemora for an indeterminate term the minimum of which will be 2 years and 6 months and the maximum 5 years.

No cases were ready for trial and court went into recess until Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

EXERCISES AT HIGH SCHOOL COMMEMORATE WASHINGTON'S VISIT

City Historian Recounts Incidents of His Visit—Knew Some Who Arrived Just Too Late to be Eye-Witnesses—The Formal Greetings Exchanged.

Impressive exercises were held at the High School this morning under the direction of Principal Lewis and Superintendent Michael. After the usual introductory reading of the Scriptures, prayer and singing of a patriotic hymn, Principal Lewis introduced Mayor Crane who stated that the board of education and the city authorities felt that the high school was the place in which to commemorate the visit of Washington to Kingston on the 16th of November, 1782, one hundred and forty years ago, and had requested the city historian, Judge Clearwater, to address the pupils. The judge who was received with prolonged applause, briefly recounted the incidents of Washington's visit, of which his account delivered at the meeting of Kingston Lodge No. 10, P. & A. M., on Tuesday night, appeared in Wednesday's Freeman, and read to the pupils the address of the trustees of the freeholders and community of the town of Kingston to Washington on the morning of his visit, and Washington's reply, which are as follows:

"We the Trustees of the Freeholders and Community of the Town of Kingston, for ourselves and in behalf of those we represent, beg leave, with the most unfeigned love and esteem, to congratulate your Excellency on your arrival in this place.

"To a People whose principles of Liberty were early decided, and whose actions have been correspondent, the appearance of a character among them, who by his wisdom has directed, and by his fortitude has led the armies of America to victory and success, affords a joy more sensibly felt than is in the power of language to express. While we take a retrospective of the past campaigns, in every vicissitude of the war we observe your Excellency exhibit the most steady patriotism, the most undaunted courage, and while as a consequence of this the ministry are sunk into negotiation and their

TO DEPART FROM GIRLISH FROCKS

Coming Winter May See Passing of Flapper Type of Dress, Writer Asserts.

DRAPED ON CLASSIC LINES

Important Part Is Played by Decorations—Circular Effects Obtained by Godets and Panels—Wide Skirts for Evening.

Fashions are becoming more sophisticated. The flapper has met a formidable rival in the woman. So this winter, writes a fashion correspondent in the New York Tribune, may see the passing of the flapper type of dress.

All of the new styles show a strong tendency to depart from the juvenile types so prevalent during the past few years. They embody dignity and importance, two characteristics which of late years have been almost entirely lacking in dress.

The long skirt and the many variations of drapery now in use have helped to bring about these changes. The important part played by drapery rather handicaps the amateur dressmaker. No more can she hope to be dressed in the height of fashion in the simple chemise frock which she made so easily. No she must include in her wardrobe gowns draped on classic lines.

The ways in which drapery has vacillated in the position that it shall take in regard to the dress is somewhat astonishing. It began by adorning the side of the frock. After assuming numerous other positions it now elects to make the front the most important part of the gown.

Circular Effects Obtained.

Many think it comparatively easy to popularize a new style and that women are waiting to welcome anything new and striking in dress. This is not so. A real change in fashions is brought about very, very slowly. It is months, sometimes a year, after a style is shown before it is accepted even in a limited way. Take, for instance, the circular skirt. Two years ago designers put their best effects into models with circular skirts in an endeavor to make this fashion popular, and during the intervening time the best creators of styles have from time to time tried to force them. But it is only this autumn that we see this type of skirt making real progress.

It is not unusual to see skirts that are plain and tight across the back with circular panels in the front and at the sides, thus making a compromise between the straight line and the circular.

While daytime dresses show fan-shaped, godets and front drapings, there is a strong tendency toward really wide skirts for the evening.

Skirts are very long. Lanvin, always the exponent of youth in dress, makes her models longer than those of any other dressmaker in Paris. So we may expect to see the extremely long-skirted frock taken up by young girls. This always is favorable to the long, tight sleeve, while there is no sleeve for the left side.

One-Side Trimming.

Another model emphasizing this tendency in dress is of pure Greek inspiration, the drapery falling in classic folds from the right shoulder. This is a Poiret model in rose, blue and white silk, with a very unusual trimming consisting of crocheted bands wrapping about the shoulders.

Hats as well as dresses have come under the influence of one-sided trimming. Some unusual trimmings appear. A lace scarf tied in a tailored bow on a plain velvet hat is quite out of the ordinary. Following is the train of the long trailing skirts used on hats during the past summer, the ends of this lace scarf fall to the wearer's knees. This is a simple type of hat, but extremely picturesque and graceful.

Metal lace is far more popular in autumn millinery than it deserves to be, for nothing less practical as a hat trimming could well be imagined. Many of the high-crowned hats of the Second Empire period show one-sided trimmings in the form of birds or clusters of small feathers.

Great extravagance is apparent in the lavish use of fur trimmings on this autumn's clothes. Chinchilla and monkey head the list. Monkey in black is still a big leader, though gray and sable color will be much in demand. Narrow double fringes of monkey set together with a fancy braid are much used as a trimming.

There is every indication that many short capes will be worn—that is, cape collars nearly large enough to be considered wraps. It is in these pieces that the furrier shows his artistry in making patterns in one fur and filling the interstices with a second fur.

The New Coiffure.

Hairstressing has always played an important part in the history of fashion. Today the coiffure and its appendages are receiving even more attention than usual. Aside from the fact that a woman's appearance is either made or marred by the manner in which she dresses her hair, there was bound to be a keen reaction from the far-reaching bobbed-hair vogue. Indeed, it would hardly seem appropriate to combine the more dignified types of dresses and their lengthened and draped lines with anything but real dignity in hairstressing.

In Paris at the present time the fashion is to draw the hair back tightly to reveal the ears. For some time past even the woman who was the fortunate possessor of beautifully shaped ears was compelled to dress her hair so as to completely conceal them.

In the winter of 1921 this mode of hairstressing was affected by many smart women, particularly in Paris, but was not taken up very widely, nor with much enthusiasm. There is still some doubt as to whether it will be generally accepted this year because it is undoubtedly a trying fashion.

Matching Headress for Gown.

Many women will not be willing to adopt this mode of hairstressing in the daytime, but will, aided by one of the new hair bands, find it quite attractive in the evening. These bands are made of tinsel-edged velvet leaves colored to match the gown, of rhinestones and velvet combined, of metallic brocades, silver lame, flowers and feathers, as well as all sorts of pearls, crystals and colored beads.

Occasionally the maker of the evening gown designs a headress to accompany it. With the wide choice which obtains in the selection of hair ornaments and bandeaux and the opportunity of having a real artist create a suitable one, there is no longer any necessity for wearing anything inappropriate or unbecoming.

Night of Queer Happenings.

There is perhaps no night in the year which the popular imagination has stamped with a more peculiar character than that of the evening of October 31, known as All-Hallows' evening, or Halloween. The idea with reference to Halloween is that it is the time when supernatural influences prevail. Spirits come from their hiding places and walk about. There is a remarkable uniformity in the brocade costumes connected with this night all over England and America. Nets and apples are everywhere in requisition. In north England the celebration at the time is called "Not-Grass night."

success of a fashion, because all women like to appear youthful, and the style that youth elects to make its own invariably becomes the prevailing mode.

Deviate From Bateau Neckline.

Designers are trying to do away with the popular bateau neckline, and in their endeavor have introduced several interesting outlines for the necks of dresses, among the most unusual being the one-sided effect. There is the deep V-shaped neck cut high at the back and extremely low in front. This type requires a gift or modesty piece, as the French call it.

A new French frock in which the one-sided effect is exaggerated almost to the point where it becomes bizarre. It is important, as it stresses the strong tendency toward one-sided effects in both neckline and sleeve. On one side the dress is cut so high that it nearly forms a collar and slopes so far to the opposite side that it falls over the shoulder. The right side shows one

Uncle Thomas' Strategy

By CHARLES E. BAXTER

Copyright, 1922, Western Newspaper Union.

"It's all right! I've fixed things up," said Uncle Thomas to his brother, Jim Newrich.

"Oh, thank heavens!" cried Elma Newrich. "Then she's consented! It would have killed me if my darling boy had really married that actress."

"Yep, it's all right," said Uncle Thomas. "I went to see her and had a straight talk with her. I told her just what the situation was. If she married Dick, you'd cut him off without a penny. But inasmuch as she had the evidence with which to bring a breach-of-promise suit, you'd be willing to pay her $10,000 if she'd half in with my plan."

"She will?"

"She jumped at it, Jim. You're all to be here tonight, you understand, you and Elma, and Dick and Miss Tremlett. You'll tell Miss Tremlett that your brother Thomas is expected to pay her his compliments. If she comes in, spot her, stand right, and denounce her in thunderous tones the woman whom I married five years ago, who ran away with a half-caste comedian. She shirks out, I follow, crying, slip her the $10,000 in $5,000 bills, and she makes her getaway. Dick's saved."

"Thomas," said Jim Newrich, in a husky voice, "you're a good, old brother. I wish every man had one like you. Here's your check; cash it before closing time, and slip her the wad as you said."

"Oh, poor Dick, my precious, innocent Dick, what could he see in that dreadful woman?" sobbed Elma Newrich.

"Oh, she ain't bad," said Uncle Thomas. "Come to that, Jim, I dunno as the boy mightn't have done worse for himself."

"Oh, Thomas, how can you speak like that?" said his sister-in-law reproachfully. "Nobody knows where she comes from, and she's on the stage—that's immoral enough, isn't it? And not a penny to her name."

Uncle Thomas would have stopped to discuss the point, but he remembered that the bank would close in half an hour, and so he hurried away.

Neither of the Newriches had ever seen Miss Tremlett, and despite their prejudice against her they were impressed against their will by the charming, vivacious young woman whom Dick proudly brought into the drawing room that evening. And when she spoke Elma Newrich was painfully aware that the visitor's accent was more Bostonian than her own.

Jim Newrich took her hand.

"We fought against this match, both of us, I confess," he said, "but now that we've seen you we are resigned to it. Oh, Elma!"

"Yes," said Elma Newrich in melancholy tones.

"You have no money, and you are in an immoral occupation," continued Mr. Newrich. "but you can live down your past as a member of the Newrich family. Money counts for a good deal and I have six millions. I paid a hundred thousand for that painting by Raphael."

"And as our daughter-in-law," put in his wife, "any reflection upon you will be a reflection upon me."

"That's all right, mother," said Dick easily. "You'll like each other first-rate."

The door opened. "Mr. Thomas Newrich," announced the English butler, clicking his calves.

Uncle Thomas entered. Dick stepped forward.

"This is my fiancée, Miss Tremlett," he began; and stopped as Uncle Thomas became petrified.

Then he seemed astounded to hear Uncle Thomas burst into a hollow laugh.

"Yes? Well, I don't think she'll be your bride, Dickie," he said. "Infamous woman, do you know me? Do you remember the husband whom you deserted to run off with an off-color low comedian five years ago?"

"What?" shouted his brother.

"Look at her! Look at her face and let that be her answer," thundered Uncle Thomas.

Miss Tremlett, sobbing convulsively into her handkerchief, moved slowly toward the door. "Viper!" hissed Uncle Thomas, and slipped a wad into her hand. "Begone from this home that you have polluted with your presence!"

"I'm going right now," sobbed Miss Tremlett.

"Come along, Dick! Good-by for the present, folks!" she called.

"What's that?" shouted the Newriches together.

"It's all right. Dick's wise," called

Miss Tremlett gayly. "We've hooked our berths for our honeymoon trip to South America. Thanks for the present. We'll continue our talk when we come home again. I'm glad you're so rich, father and mother-in-law."

The Diamond Beetle.

One of the most beautiful of all insects is the "diamond beetle" of Brazil. According to the recent investigations of an American naturalist who has lately visited that country, the sparkling colors of this beetle, which blazes with extraordinary brilliance in the sunshine, originate in an entirely different way from the hues of butterflies. The scales of the diamond beetle appear to consist of two layers, separated by an exceedingly thin interspace, and the light falling upon them experiences the effect of interference, so that the resulting colors correspond with those of thin plates or of the soap bubble.

Orchestra Conductors.

Although it is known that Lully died from accidentally hitting his foot with his baton, the first modern use of it in orchestral conducting was attributed to Spohr in 1820. Hitherto there had been a dual control of the orchestra. An eminent musician was at the piano-forte to "play with the orchestra at pleasure, which when it was heard," says Spohr, "had a very bad effect. The real conductor was the first violin, who gave the tempo, and now and then when the orchestra began to falter, gave the beat with the bow of his violin."

GRAVEL ROADS ARE HELPFUL

Farmers of Massac County, Illinois, Are Not Bothered Much by Muddy Weather.

Muddy weather doesn't bother the farmers in Massac county, Illinois, very much, because there are over 300 miles of gravel roads in the county, and each year their mileage grows larger. The cost of graveling roads in Massac county is not very great because the gravel is taken right out of the hills along the Ohio river. Some mine waste is used for road-making. In either case the farmers have a good road to market.

Builders Attend School.

In Wisconsin highway builders attend school where construction plans are discussed with a view of bringing about better understanding of the road problem and its solution. Among the attendants are: State, county, town, village and city road officials, contractors, foremen, patrolmen, roller operators and other road workers.

Many Good Road Advocates.

Throughout the United States there are no fewer than 80,000,000 people who are advocates of good roads.

Some Queer Foods.

Chickens' tongues and unwhittled chickens are Chinese delicacies; sloth is eaten on the Island of Demerara; a pale blue mole and two mice were the tasty supper that Livingston's guide gave him after crossing the Canal.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

by MARY GRAHAM BONNER

PORCUPINE PARTY

The hairy badger from South Africa had had his dinner. Then he had had a delightful bath or spray from the hose. The keeper had given him this and he had enjoyed it even more than the visitors who had looked on.

The hairy badger thought he was very polite to let such a lot of people watch him having his bath. Yes, he thought he was most obliging.

The white nosed coati-mundi from South America was having a beautiful time taking in his own grunting fashion to one of the visitors who had come to the zoo.

He had had a nice dinner and was feeling particularly well.

It had had a little chopped beef too with the rest of his dinner.

And it was nice to be a great pet. Oh yes, that was particularly nice.

The striped tailed dog and the white throated capou were together as they always were. The white throated capou looks exactly like a monkey and is a little animal from South America.

The sapajou is just like a monkey in all his looks.

The sapajou had had his dinner and he had had a little meat, for he was quite fond of that. Everything he had had he had put first in his pan of water in much the way the raccoon family will wash all their food.

Now the sapajou and the striped-tailed dog had been great friends.

"A Splendid Feast."

No one knew just why. But the best of friends they were.

And so they lived together in their zoo home as they had always been together since they had first seen each other.

Now happy they were together, too! It is a puzzle people to see the sapajou and the dog in a little zoo home side by side.

The sapajou was much interested in the visitors and sat up close so he could see them all and his little eyes looked so amused and as though he were enjoying himself so much.

He grinned at the keeper every time the keeper went by and the keeper would speak to him and the sapajou would look much pleased.

The striped-tailed dog, too, had come from South America. And as the sapajou watched the people he said to himself, "This is a wonderful show—seeing all the people pass along."

"And gracious me, how many children there are! Well, I must say I find grown-ups and children very amusing to watch. Yes, they cheer me up—altogether I really am always very cheerful. But they make me feel so jolly and so amused."

Now, while all these animals were enjoying themselves in their various ways the four yellow-haired porcupines were having a party.

And they were not paying a scrap of attention to the visitors. They sat in a circle with their backs turned to the people.

In the very center of the circle was a little baby porcupine. And a more cunning little creature you never could see, I'm sure!

He was very small—not so very much bigger than a guinea pig and yet his parents were such enormously big porcupines.

All of the four porcupines were very, very large.

The little one was sitting up too, just the way they all did and he was nibbling at lettuce and carrots and eating very grown-up food for a little fellow only two weeks old!

For that was all he was. His parents had been born in Alaska and his uncle and aunt had been born in the United States but he had been born in the zoo and he found it was very nice.

A little porcupine is like a little guinea pig in the way it can eat anything right away.

There was a splendid feast for the porcupines and some of them were finishing off with a dessert of bread which many of the animals like as a dessert.

Oh, yes, it was a real porcupine party but the one who felt like the guest of honor was the dear little baby porcupine with his funny little black body and his poor little attempts at quills.

But some day he would have enormous ones like his parents. In the meantime it was enough to eat and eat and enjoy life. And the people looked through a space between two of the porcupines so they could see the little, little, little fellow of the zoo.

MORE SAUCES

Some of the richer sauces are those which are made with eggs and cream. The following are a few worth indexing:

Mousseline Sauce.—Beat three egg yolks until thick, add one-half cupful of cream, one-half cupful of butter, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, a dash of pepper and one-half tablespoonful of lemon juice. Cook over hot water, stirring constantly until thick, adding the lemon juice last.

Hollandaise Sauce.—Cream one-half cupful of butter, add gradually the beaten yolks of two eggs, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, and a dash of pepper. Combine with one-third cupful of hot water or one-half cupful of hot cream, cook until the sauce thickens, then remove and cool for two minutes; add one tablespoonful of lemon juice and serve at once. Nice with boiled cauliflower or asparagus and fish.

Golden Sauce.—Beat two eggs slightly, add one-third of a cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of canned peas, pineapple or other fruit juice, two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice. Cook until thick, add one teaspoonful of chopped maraschino cherries. Cool and serve.

Norwegian Fruit Sauce.—Rub one cupful of cooked prunes through a strainer. Add one-quarter of a cupful of soaked cooked raisins, one stick of cinnamon, two tablespoonfuls of minute tapioca and one cupful of cherry or pineapple juice. Cook until the tapioca is clear. Two hours in a double boiler gives the best flavor; add two teaspoonfuls of lemon juice. Thin, if necessary. Use on cold meats or puddings.

Foamy Egg Sauce.—Beat three egg yolks until thick, add one-fourth of a cupful of powdered sugar and one-eighth of a teaspoonful of salt, add two-thirds of a cupful of boiling fruit juice. Fold in the well-beaten white and serve at once. Hot milk may be used in place of the fruit juice if desired, then flavor with any desired flavoring.

Predicts Earth's Cold Future.

Professors and weather prophets are fond of predicting great future changes in climatic conditions on our earth. As a rule they wisely refrain from precise particulars as to when these changes will take place. Maj. R. A. Marriott has been more definite. Working on the late General Drayson's theory of a big change in the inclination of the earth's axis, Major Marriott tells us that for the next four centuries the winters will grow progressively warmer, until about A. D. 2205 the difference between summer and winter will be least. Subsequently, however, the earth will get colder and colder every year, and instead of the tropical temperatures which some predict, another glacial epoch is promised by Major Marriott, the maximum severity of which will be felt by the human race if any are left on the earth—in A. D. 1583A.

STONE RIDGE:

Stone Ridge, Nov. 16.—The Halloween party held on the grounds of the Methodist Church was a very happy occasion. The children of the village were present in large numbers, and with their elders numbered from 150 to 200 guests of the church. All entered heartily into the games and sports provided, as well as showing hearty appreciation of the bountiful refreshments provided. Frankfurters were roasted over an open fire out of doors, and hot rolls, cranberries and cocoa made a substantial lunch. People wondered how one had ever thought before to give the children of the village such a jolly good time.
Other doings at the Methodist

Maple Sugar Long Known.

In the days of Napoleon's wars maple sugar had been made for some time in Bohemia, the government encouraging its manufacture. However, it soon died out there, for the sugar best came into prominence. The earliest explorers in America found the Indians making sugar from the sap of the huge maple trees that stood in companies and brigades in the ancient forests and nobody can tell when they began it.

$2.21 FOR OCTOBER POOLED MILK LANDS ON BACK OF A BIG DEER

The Dairymen's League Cooperative Association announces that the base pool price to be paid to dairymen throughout its territory for milk produced during the month of October will be $2.21 per 100 pounds. This is the base price for milk testing 3 per cent butter fat in the 201-210 mile freight zone out of New York city. The price paid to each individual farmer will vary according to butter fat and according to his distance from market.

This price of $2.21 per 100 pounds is the price to farmers after the cost of administration, advertising, insurance, and other expenses have been deducted. The total of this deduction for the month of October amounts to 4 cents, showing a marked decrease in the cost of administration of the organization below the cost in the months of August and September. A loan to the association of 20 cents per 100 pounds is made on the certificates of indebtedness plan for the purpose of taking care of additional marketing facilities as the best interests of members demand from time to time.

The October price is 21 cents per 100 pounds more than league farmers received for their September milk, and 46 1/2 cents more than for August.

Raiser Turk, Seeking Hickory Nuts, Falls From Tree With Startling Result—How Wandering Gallapows Came to Enjoy an Unexpected Turkey Dinner.

"Know what I would like to have just about now?" asked Raiser Turk addressing the Biven boys, Blink and Zink, and Captain Ralph Roodboy, as the four were preparing to turn in for the night at the Roodboy hunting shack in the mountains.

"What?" asked Blink, with a grin.

"Some good old fashioned hickory nuts," replied Raiser smacking his lips.

"You are easily satisfied," interrupted Captain Roodboy. "For there is a tree just loaded with nuts about a quarter of a mile from here."

"No for the tree tomorrow," replied Raiser.

It was not until late afternoon the next day, however, that Raiser was able to leave on his nut hunting expedition. He found the tree described by Roodboy without trouble and as the best nuts seemed to be high up in the tree he commenced to climb up in the tree, and was soon busily engaged in filling the bag he had taken with him.

So busily engaged was he that he did not notice the passing of time until it became too dark to pick any more and then he started to climb down out of the tree. When about half way down he suddenly lost his footing, due to the darkness and plunged toward the earth.

Fortunately for Raiser a big buck deer had taken it into its mind to stroll by under the tree at just that moment, and Raiser landed on the animal's back.

Who was the most startled the deer or Raiser is a question.

The frightened deer plunged forward in mad gallop with Raiser wildly hanging to its horns. On and on plunged the deer until Raiser thought he must have traveled a hundred miles.

Raiser did not dare let go his hold on the deer's horns and the animal was too busy running away to think of trying to dislodge his unwelcome guest.

Suddenly the deer stumbled over a log in the trail and Raiser losing his hold was hurled high in the air.

At the same instant a pair of huge wild turkeys roosting for the night on a limb of a nearby tree became frightened and started to spread their wings to go away from there.

How Raiser did it even he can not explain but at the precise moment that the turkeys took to their wings he grasped a turkey with either hand and clung fast to their legs.

Although the turkeys were both unusually large they were unable to bear the weight of Raiser aloft and commenced to fall earthward. Their wings acted as a parachute and Raiser struck the ground gently and unharmed. He still clasped a tight hold to the two birds.

And he still had them when he finally found his way to the shack in the early morning hours, and that explains how the Gallapows enjoyed an unexpected turkey dinner that noon.

When Your Neighbors Dance

When you catch the swing of a waltz or the rhythmic beat of a jazz over on your neighbor's porch, that's the time you become convinced you must have a Columbia Grafonola.

It's only natural. Nearly everybody likes to dance; and to hear your favorite dances, the latest hits, rollicking jizzes played on the Columbia Grafonola, and to dance them all—that's enjoying life.

Every Columbia Grafonola has a Non Set Automatic Stop built right into the motor. Never stops before it should. Always stops at the very end. Nothing to move or set or measure.

No other phonograph has this device—no other phonograph can get it. Don't fail to ask us to demonstrate the stop that needs no setting.

IS CLARENCE SISSY NAME?
STAGE JESTERS ARE WARNEDCleveland Man Organizes League of Men of That Name to Stop Jokers.

To save the historic name of Clarence from being ridiculed into extinction, a league of Clarences is being formed by Clarence Massey of Cleveland, who has written to hundreds of Clarences asking them to join the cause.

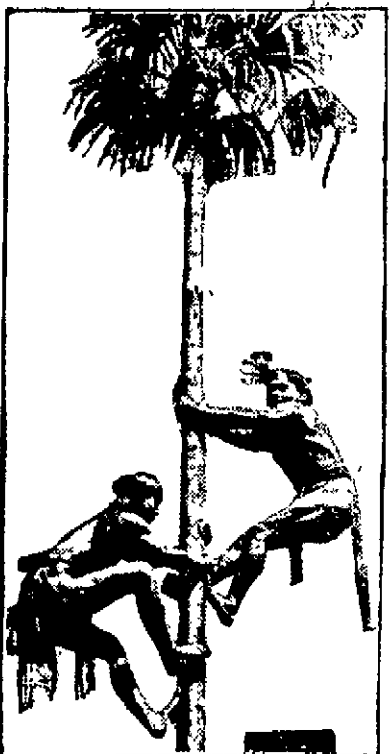

Since prohibition was taken away from them as a subject of comedy, vaudeville artists have specialized in developing the wit and humor which they find in the name of Clarence, according to Massey. He proposes that 10,000 Clarences rise and compel the vaudeville managers to deprive their artists of the sure fire hit which any mention of the name of Clarence is found to be.

At the same time the Clarence league, or the Clarence Anti-Defamation league, will attempt to do some missionary work with the general public. An effort will be made to prove that there is nothing inherently shrieking about the name of Clarence.

In his circular letter to the Clarences of New York and Newark, Mr. Massey traces the name centuries before the "false, fleeting and perjured Clarence" of Shakespeare's history, and finds that Lionel of Antwerp was the first duke of Clarence in the fourteenth century. Clarence was in those days the symbol of rugged and high qualities.

"Since then," wrote Massey, "hundreds of famous men have been named Clarence, but some smart Alecks of recent years have come to look upon the name of Clarence as a joke. They seem to think that anybody with the name of Clarence is a mollycoddle."

"Such is not the case. All the Clarences I have known have been upstanding, two-dusted men. 'Whenever anyone ridicules the name of Clarence, impress upon him that he is not funny, but only foolish'."

LIKED TO HEAR JUDGE

Intoxicated Man Wandered Into Court-Room and Fell Asleep.

"I come in here often because I like to hear you talk," said Thomas Harney, thirty-four years old, of New York city, when he was asked in police court why he wandered into the courtroom while intoxicated when he was not under arrest?

Harney wandered into the court and took a seat while Judge Charles W. Boote was hearing cases. Harney fell asleep and toppled to the floor. An officer found that he was hopelessly intoxicated and placed a charge of drunkenness against him.

Judge Boote questioned Harney, and he said he liked the advice the magistrate gave prisoners. The judge gave Harney some advice for his own benefit and then dismissed him with a suspended sentence.

DIE TRYING TO SAVE DOG

Young Man Runs in Path of Machine as Pet Leaps to Safety.

In an attempt to save his pet dog from being run over by a touring car, Walter Saylor, twenty-one years old, of Fort Wayne, Ind., was struck by the machine, receiving injuries which caused his death. The pet leaped to safety when he saw his danger.

The dog escaped from Saylor as they were walking along a country road and ran in front of a car driven by T. C. Dove. Mr. Saylor gave chase, running directly in the path of the machine.

VASSAR DAY IN POUGHKEEPSIE

Poughkeepsie, Nov. 16.—The local branch of the Vassar Alumnae Association has pledged $2,500 as the association's gift to the Vassar Salary Endowment Fund in addition to personal alumnae pledges. The branch is now planning to realize this pledge by a Vassar Day this month to be run similar to the popular Dollar Day in Poughkeepsie. The Merchants' Bureau first endorsed the plan, and the alumnae have been busy interviewing the local merchants to determine their plans for cooperation. The suggestions they have made to run both bargains and specials for the day assures a crowd of shoppers for each of the stores entering the plan. A percentage of the day's sales will, it is estimated, amount to the branch pledge.

This Vassar Day will be Wednesday, November 22. The Vassar group here will appreciate any Kingston people who are going to Poughkeepsie, planning to do their shopping on that day.

ONE GOOD LIGHT AND A LOT OF POOR ONES

Some on Bridge Still Hide When It Rains.

The upper side of the Rondout Creek Bridge continues to remain in darkness since the electric lights were extinguished some time ago on account of water getting into the conduits. Through improper design the wires are exposed to dampness which puts them out of commission every time it rains. The lights on the lower side remain lighted. A much appreciated improvement at the Kingston side of the bridge is the spot light which has been erected lighting up the post where the traffic officer is located. Before this light was placed it was impossible for an approaching automobile driver to see the traffic officer. In many cities every traffic officer's posts is illuminated by an overhead spot light which illuminates the post without blinding the approaching drivers.

This play is comical and amusing. Mr. and Mrs. John Beaver, Jr., will give a number of selections on the piano and violin. Thursday evening at 8 o'clock the Tinnie family of Port Ewen will give an evening's entertainment consisting of Scotch songs, readings and sketches.

IN HUMBLE HOMES

People of Europe Long Satisfied With Wretched Huts.

Even Small Degree of Comfort Only Came About the Beginning of the Sixteenth Century.

In different countries, of course, people have different kinds of houses to live in, and it is curious to note how the ideas of people vary as to what they consider is "comfort" as regards a dwelling. Of course, climate has a good deal to do with it. In Burma, for instance, where they certainly know how to build, for the Burmese temples are some of the most magnificent in the world, it is said that an entire house can be constructed without a single nail being used, so lightly are they put together. The framework is of wooden posts or bamboo, tightly bound together, the floors of bamboo, the walls of matting and the roofs thatched with palm leaves. There is never any upstairs to these houses, because the Burmese dislike the idea of having anyone's feet above their heads. How comfortable they would be in one of our large hotels or one of our tall houses, and how wretched they should be in one of their flimsy little huts. Then, again, basements do so astonish eastern people who come to Europe on a visit. Indeed, one party of Orientals who once came to London, seeing people going down area steps to basement houses, thought that they were going to another city, lying somewhere entirely below London. To dig into the ground and live in rooms below the surface level was something they never for a moment heard of anyone doing, and it is said that that interested them more than all the sights they were shown in London.

But, just as houses vary in different parts of the world, according to the amount of comfort people living in them require, so have houses of European nations varied from one period to another. Very rough and poor in quality at first, but improving, as in course of time civilization advanced and better things became possible, until by slow degrees they arrived at what they are now.

At one time, the only strong and substantial buildings in a country were the castles of the king and of the nobles, while the people lived in wooden or mud huts, crowding into the castles for protection in time of war. The living part of these castles was very small sometimes, consisting of only a hall, where all took their meals and where most of them slept on the floor, a chapel and perhaps one or more private rooms. It is said that the French kings, even as late as Plantagenet times, had so few rooms in their palaces that they usually shared a sleeping room with their courtiers. Later castles had more accommodation, and so had the manor houses which succeeded the castles and which were generally strong enough to stand a siege, being surrounded by a moat. But none of these houses had fixed glass windows until Henry VIII's time, and, of course, no chimneys. The fireplace was in the middle of the hall and the smoke used to escape by the door, so living in them must have been different from anything we know. It was not until the time of Tudor sovereigns that houses began to be planned solely with a view to comfort. Up to then, the chief consideration had always been that of safety against attack; but, by the sixteenth century, the country had become so settled and peaceful that comfort could now take first place.—Christian Science Monitor.

When Flappers Were Clippers.

One evening I was walking in the plaza when I saw a female ahead, who appeared to be the prettiest molded little vessel that I ever cast my eyes on. I followed in her wake, and examined her; such a clean run I never beheld—so neat, too, in all her rigging—everything so nicely stowed under hatches. And then she sailed along in such a style, at one moment lifting so lightly, just like a frigate with her topsails on the caps that can't help going along. At another time, as she turned a corner sharp up in the wind, wake as straight as an arrow—no leeway. I made all sail to sheer alongside of her, and when under quarter, examined her close. Never saw such a fine swell in the counter, and all so trim—no ropes towing overboard. "Well, Mr. Simple," I said to myself, "if her figurehead and bows be finished off by the same builder, she's perfect." So I shot ahead and yawned a little—caught a peep at her through her veil, and saw two black eyes—as bright as beads and as large as damsons. I saw quite enough and, not wishing to frighten her, I dropped back astern. —From "Peter Simple," by Captain Marryat.

Golf on Horseback.

An old lady from the interior of Virginia, who, upon several occasions before coming to Washington had seen the golf players knocking the balls around at White Sulphur, returned to her home in the mountain fastness after having spent a couple of days in this city, relates the Washington Star. Upon being asked what she thought of Washington, she replied: "Huh! they've got lots of big buildings and good roads, but they never seem to be contented. Why, they actually play golf on horseback." The dear old soul had been shown a game of polo during her stay in the city.

Selecting Rugs for Home.

One of the most important things to consider, when selecting rugs for the home, is that the rug should harmonize with its surroundings. Both coloring and design should be in keeping, since furnishings are of value only in their relation to one another.

INDIANS SEEK SIX MILLION ACRES OF NEW YORK LAND

Oneidas Organizing to Regain
$2,000,000,000 Territory
Sold in 1784.

Oneida Indians, living on the reservations in Outagamie and Brown counties, Wisconsin, are organizing to press their claims to more than 6,000,000 acres of land in the heart of New York state, valued at more than $2,000,000,000. A committee of 22 persons, with Nelson Mettoren as chairman and Mrs. Laura Cornelius Kellogg as secretary, has been appointed to co-operate with similar committees named by the Six Nations of Indians who would share in the distribution if the property is recovered.

Mrs. Kellogg and Amos Baird, both Oneida Indians, represented the tribe in an investigation of the claims of the Six Nations. The delegates reported the findings at a meeting of the Wisconsin Indians.

The claims are based on a treaty signed in 1784 by the United States government and the Six Nations whereby approximately 6,000,000 acres in New York state were ceded to the Indians. Most of the land was sold almost at once by individual Indians and tribes to the state of New York and the Indians moved, some going to Canada and others to Wisconsin and Oklahoma.

In 1794 the United States government amended the treaty to provide that none of the land could be sold except by the Six Nations acting as a unit, and the clause also stated it was the original intention of the government to include that provision in the treaty of 1784. Most of the land had been disposed of by that time, however.

The Indians now claim the property was sold in violation of the treaty and an effort is being made to recover it. The fight is being carried to the New York state and to the federal government.

KID BATS THOUSAND IN HOOTCH SMELLING LEAGUE

Here's eighteen-month-old Sam Collins, Jr., son of Kentucky's prohibition director, who is, himself, somepunkins as a hootch detector. Young Sam is battling a thousand in the hootch-smelling league, in witness whereof we present the subsequent evidence. Mrs. Collins and Sam, Junior, were on their way to Sam, Senior's office for lunch. On the way, mother and son detected the odor of liquor emanating from an automobile belonging to a man who already had had several liquor charges pending against him. Father was called to the scene, while Sam, Junior, kept detecting, with the result that the offender was arrested, fined, and his car confiscated. Ever since, Sam, Junior, busies himself about autos, hoping to get the "stuff" on another run runner.

BECHUANALAND LONG "DRY"

Chief Khama of South African State Has Enforced Prohibition.

For 50 years Bechuanaland, north of Cape Colony in South Africa, has enjoyed peace and prosperity under Chief Khama, with Great Britain lending a helping hand when needed. Khama, the oldest native ruler in Africa, is now celebrating his jubilee. According to the Bulawayo correspondent of the London Post, he is a remarkable man.

Khama is a Christian and he succeeded in maintaining his influence over his people during the difficult transition period when the old order was giving place to the new. He was no nappy-pappy ruler. He made a law that none of his people should touch firewater and he enforced it. "One of the secrets of Khama's success," writes the correspondent, "is his imposition of absolute prohibition of liquor."

To the Art, Thou Weather Shark.

Ants are credited with an instinctive knowledge of the general weather for a whole season. When they are observed in the summer enlarging and strengthening their dwellings, it is said to be a sign of an early and cold winter.

Drilling and Boring.
In machine shop parlance, drilling is making a round hole through metal or the like with a rotating pointed tool that forces its way through by pressure and rotation, while boring is enlarging a hole that already exists. Cutting a circular hole in wood with a brace and bit, as done by carpenters, is boring, but a similar operation in metal is drilling.

The Home of Patience.
The East is the home of patience. You see it expressed in the exquisite carvings of Persia and in the rugs of Asia Minor, whose myriad knots, deftly placed in marvelous precision, amaze you with their infinite number. With endless perseverance, year after year, often through a lifetime, the artisan of the East will labor patiently at his task that it may be perfect. Inspiration will not alone produce such artistic creations; only boundless patience, steadily applied, will accomplish them.

What is Good Lens?
A "good" lens, in the photographic sense, is one which will give a perfectly clear distinct image, without distortion, and without "false images," when it is used with a large stop, and over a wide angle. Before, therefore, we are in a position to say whether a lens is "good" or not, we must know at what aperture it will work, and what angle it includes. It is evident, therefore, that something more than a mere capacity to give sharp pictures is necessary.

Paris Women Reported Cutting Off Little Toe

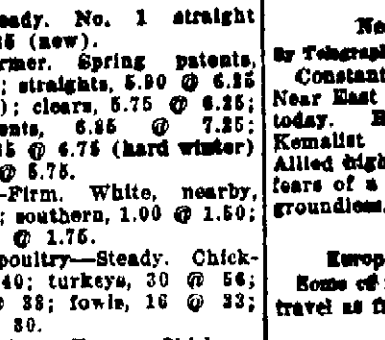

It's a sad commentary on the shoe business when women consider the amputation of the fifth toe in order to wear a smaller size shoe. As reported from Paris. Lower newspaper reports spoke of some Chinese girls who were going to "follow this new fad" instead of bobbing their hair. We believe the American woman is too sensible and too fond of her physical perfection to fall for anything like this.

COMFORT IS BETTER

How much better to wear shoes that really fit and allow room for all five toes and give wonderful comfort while, affording that trim neatness of appearance for which American women are noted the world over. The Cantilever shoe will do this for you.

IN HUMBLE HOMES

People of Europe Long Satisfied With Wretched Huts.

Even Small Degree of Comfort Only Came About the Beginning of the Sixteenth Century.

In different countries, of course, people have different kinds of houses to live in, and it is curious to note how the ideas of people vary as to what they consider is comfort as regards a dwelling. Of course, climate has a good deal to do with it. In Burma, for instance, where they certainly know how to build, for the Burmese temples are some of the most magnificent in the world, it is said that an entire house can be constructed without a single nail being used, so lightly are they put together. The framework is of wooden posts or bamboo, tightly bound together, the floors of bamboo, the walls of matting and the roofs thatched with palm leaves. There is never any upstairs to these houses, because the Burmese dislike the idea of having anyone's feet above their heads. How comfortable they would be in one of our large hotels or one of our tall houses, and how wretched we should be in one of their flimsy little huts. Then, again, basements do so astonish eastern people who come to Europe on a visit. Indeed, one party of Orientals who once came to London, seeing people going down area steps to basement houses, thought that they were going to another city, lying somewhere entirely below London. To dig into the ground and live in rooms below the surface level was something they never for a moment heard of anyone doing, and it is said that that interested them more than all the sights they were shown in London.

But, just as houses vary in different parts of the world, according to the amount of comfort people living in them require, so have houses of European nations varied from one period to another. Very rough and poor in quality at first, but improving, as in course of time civilization advanced and better things became possible, until by slow degrees they arrived at what they are now.

At one time, the only strong and substantial buildings in a country were the castles of the king and of the nobles, while the people lived in wooden or mud huts, crowding into the castles for protection in time of war. The living part of these castles was very small sometimes, consisting of only a hall, where all took their meals and where most of them slept on the floor, a chapel and perhaps one or more private rooms. It is said that the French kings, even as late as Plantagenet times, had so few rooms in their palaces that they usually shared a sleeping room with their courtiers. Later castles had more accommodation, and so had the manor houses which succeeded the castles and which were generally strong enough to stand a siege, being surrounded by a moat. But none of these houses had fixed glass windows until Henry VIII's time, and, of course, no chimneys. The fireplace was in the middle of the hall and the smoke used to escape by the door, so living in them must have been different from anything we know. It was not until the time of Tudor sovereigns that houses began to be planned solely with a view to comfort. Up to then, the chief consideration had always been that of safety against attack; but, by the sixteenth century, the country had become so settled and peaceful that comfort could now take first place.—Christian Science Monitor.

When Flappers Were Clippers.

One evening I was walking in the plaza when I saw a female ahead, who appeared to be the prettiest molded little vessel that I ever cast my eyes on. I followed in her wake, and examined her; such a clean run I never beheld—so neat, too, in all her rigging—everything so nicely stowed under hatches. And then she sailed along in such a style, at one moment lifting so lightly, just like a frigate with her topsails on the cups that can't help going along. At another time, as she turned a corner sharp up in the wind, wake as straight as an arrow—no leeway. I made all sail to sheer alongside of her, and when under quarter examined her close. Never saw such a fine swell in the counter, and all so trim—no ropes towing overboard. "Well, Mr. Simple," I said to myself, "if her figurehead and bows be finished off by the same builder, she's perfect." So I shot ahead and yanked a little—caught a peep at her through her veil, and saw two black eyes—as bright as beads and as large as damsons. I saw quite enough and, not wishing to frighten her, I dropped back astern.—From "Peter Simple," by Captain Marryat.

Golf on Horseback.

An old lady from the interior of Virginia, who, upon several occasions before coming to Washington had seen the golf players knocking the balls around at White Sulphur, returned to her home in the mountain fastness after having spent a couple of days in this city, relates the Washington Star. Upon being asked what she thought of Washington, she replied: "Ruh! they've got lots of big buildings and good roads, but they never seem to be contented. Why, they actually play golf on horseback." The same old soul had been shown a game of polo during her stay in the city.

Selecting Rugs for Home.

One of the most important things to consider, when selecting rugs for the home, is that the rug should harmonize with its surroundings. Both coloring and design should be in keeping, since furnishings are of value only in their relation to one another.

INDIANS SEEK SIX MILLION ACRES OF NEW YORK LAND

Oneidas Organizing to Regain $2,000,000,000 Territory Sold in 1784.

Oneida Indians, living on the reservations in Outagamie and Brown counties, Wisconsin, are organizing to press their claims to more than 6,000,000 acres of land in the heart of New York state, valued at more than $2,000,000,000. A committee of 22 persons, with Nelson Metoxen as chairman and Mrs. Laura Corneliuss Kellogg as secretary, has been appointed to co-operate with similar committees named by the Six Nations of Indians who would share in the distribution if the property is recovered.

Mrs. Kellogg and Amos Baird, both Oneida Indians, represented the tribe in an investigation of the claims of the Six Nations. The delegates reported the findings at a meeting of the Wisconsin Indians.

The claims are based on a treaty signed in 1784 by the United States government and the Six Nations whereby approximately 6,000,000 acres in New York state were ceded to the Indians. Most of the land was sold almost at once by individual Indians and tribes to the state of New York and the Indians moved, some going to Canada and others to Wisconsin and Oklahoma.

In 1794 the United States government amended the treaty to provide that none of the land could be sold except by the Six Nations acting as a unit, and the clause also stated it was the original intention of the government to include that provision in the treaty of 1784. Most of the land had been disposed of by that time, however.

The Indians now claim the property was sold in violation of the treaty and an effort is being made to recover it. The fight is being carried to the New York state and to the federal government.

KID BATS THOUSAND IN HOOTCH SMELLING LEAGUE

Here's eighteen-month-old Sam, Collins, Jr., son of Kentucky's prohibition director, who is, himself, some punks as a hootch detector. Young Sam is battling a thousand in the hootch-smelling league, in witness whereof we present the subsequent evidence. Mrs. Collins and Sam, Junior, were on their way to Sam, Senior's office for lunch. On the way mother and son detected the odor of liquor emanating from an automobile belonging to a man who already had had several liquor charges pending against him. Father was called to the scene, while Sam, Junior, kept detecting, with the result that the offender was arrested, fined, and his car confiscated. Ever since, Sam, Junior, busies himself about autos, hoping to get the "stuff" on another rum runner.

BECHUANALAND LONG "DRY"

Chief Khama of South African State Has Enforced Prohibition.

For 50 years Bechuanaland, north of Cape Colony in South Africa, has enjoyed peace and prosperity under Chief Khama, with Great Britain lending a helping hand when needed. Khama, the oldest native ruler in Africa, is now celebrating his jubilee. According to the Bulawayo correspondent of the London Post, he is a remarkable man.

Khama is a Christian and he succeeded in maintaining his influence over his people during the difficult transition period when the old order was giving place to the new. He was no namby-pamby ruler. He made a law that none of his people should touch firewater and he enforced it.

"One of the secrets of Khama's success," writes the correspondent, "is his imposition of absolute prohibition of intoxicants. Bechuanaland was dry before the Anti-Saloon league began to think of prohibition."

To the Ant. Thos. Weather Shark. Ants are credited with an instinctive knowledge of the general weather for a whole season. When they are observed in the summer enlarging and strengthening their dwellings, it is said to be a sign of an early and cold winter.

Drilling and Boring.

To machine shop parlance, drilling is making a round hole through metal or the like with a rotating pointed tool that forces its way through by pressure and rotation, while boring is enlarging a hole that already exists. Cutting a circular hole in wood with a brace and bit, as done by carpenters, is boring, but a similar operation in metal is drilling.

The Home of Patience.

The East is the home of patience. You see it expressed in the exquisite carvings of Persia and in the rugs of Asia Minor, whose myriad knots, deftly placed in marvelous precision, amaze you with their infinite number. With endless perseverance, year after year, often through a lifetime, the artisan of the East will labor patiently at his task that it may be perfect. Inspiration will not alone produce such artistic creations; only boundless patience, steadily applied, will accomplish them.

What is Good Lens?

A "good" lens, in the photographic sense, is one which will give a perfectly clear distinct image, without distortion, and without "false images," when it is used with a large stop, and over a wide angle. Before, therefore, we are in a position to say whether a lens is "good" or not, we must know what aperture it will work, and what angle it includes. It is evident, therefore, that something more than a mere capacity to give sharp pictures is necessary.

Cheerfulness Goes Far.

Wendroba is the strength of cheerfulness, altogether past calculation in power of endurance.—Thomas Carlyle.

So startling have become the "poison dinner murders" alleged to involve Mrs. Tillie Klimek, Nellie Sturmer Konik, now estimated at twelve, that Assistant State's Attorney William McLaughlin, has been directed to devote his entire time to the case. The so-called Chicago murder composed of women, who carefully worked out diabolical murders with arsenic. Mrs. Klimek has applied her with poison.

Ghost in Parliament House.
The ghost of Guy Fawkes is not the only spook of the British house of commons. The most famous, as well as the most sinister ghost of St. Stephen is the one called after Big Ben. It is certainly the best authenticated parliamentary specter, and it is said that on the day following each of its appearances a member of the royal family has died.

Paris Women Reported Cutting Off Little Toe

It's a sad commentary on the shoe business when women consider the amputation of the fifth toe in order to wear a smaller shoe, as reported from Paris. Later newspaper reports spoke of some Chicago girls who were going to "follow this new fad" instead of bobbing their hair. We believe the American woman is too sensible and too fond of her physical perfection to fall for anything like this.

COMFORT IS BETTER

How much better to wear shoes that really fit and allow room for all five toes and give wonderful comfort while according that trim silhouette of appearance for which American women are noted the world over. The Cantilever shoe will do this for you.

Flexible and light, well-shaped and modish, the Cantilever shoe makes you feel younger, increases your endurance, stimulates your out-of-door activity and lessens the fatigue of your household duties.

QUALITY AND STYLE

Cantilevers are made in black kid, brown kid, tan calf, white fabric and can be ordered in any material of which shoes can be made. They are quality shoes sold at reasonable prices. Cantilever comfort has brought a new joy in living to thousands of well-dressed American women.

Come and see the styles in our new Autumn stock. We are exclusive Cantilever agents for this city.

BAILEY'S WIFE DODGED IN TIME

But The Beer Bottle Hurled By Her Husband Struck Miss Almira Baisley In Face Cutting a Deep Gash—Miss Baisley Says It Was An Accident And Refuses To Press Charge.

Early Wednesday evening George Bailey of No. 34 Ann street went out in the yard at his home and returned with a bottle of beer which he hurled at his wife. His wife saw the bottle coming and ducked and it flew over her head and struck her sister, Miss Almira Baisley, in the side of the face, just under an eye.

Miss Baisley went to the office of Dr. A. A. Stern on the Strand where the physician found it necessary to take several stitches to close the wound.

While the wound was being dressed Policeman Roedell heard of the affair and went to the doctor's office and Miss Baisley informed him that her brother-in-law was home. Officer Roedell went to the house and placed him under arrest on a charge of assault.

This morning before Judge Schirick in police court Miss Almira Baisley stated that she did not dare to press the charge against Bailey as it was an accident. "He did not mean to hit me," said she, "he threw the beer bottle at my sister who dodged it and I got it."

Judge Schirick discharged Bailey but warned him to be more careful in the future.

Duet, Soprano and Alto, "Put Ye in the Sickle."

Miss Los Kamp and Miss Edith Holmes.

Soprano Solo, "For the Earth Bringeth forth Fruit."

RESUME POULTRY CLUB MEETINGS

Accord, Nov. 16.—During September and October the Accord Poultry Club suspended its monthly meetings due to the time needed to organize and start the Roundout Valley Co-operative Poultry Association, Inc., which is an organization for marketing of eggs. Now since the latter organization is operating, the meetings of the Accord Poultry Club will be resumed.

The coming poultry meeting is fixed for Wednesday evening, November 22nd, at 7:30 o'clock, in the Methodist Church Hall. Professor Craig Sandford of Cornell University, and specialist for the Orange and Ulster counties poultry project, will be the chief speaker. He will speak on the prevalent poultry diseases, and how to prevent them. How to prevent roup, the chicken disease we all dread, will be discussed especially. Mr. Sandford has been hired by the Accord Poultry Club, and the Ulster County Farm Bureau to give a number of lectures on poultry husbandry at the monthly meetings of the club. These club meetings are thoroughly interesting and instructive, afford fellowship among poultrymen, and contribute great inspiration to the poultry industry of the valley. Refreshments will be served. Every-body welcome. If you have a sick bird bring it along and let Mr. Sandford tell you what the trouble is.

DEER SEASON ENDS WITH ACCIDENT

The first deer hunting accident in this vicinity happened between 2 and 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon in the woods on the Wittenberg mountain when Ward Berryan, aged 18, who lives back of Glenford, was shot in the right foot. He, with two companions, was hunting deer and a charge of No. 4 shot struck him in the right foot. Berryan was brought to the office of Dr. H. P. Van Wageningen on John street who amputated one of the toes of the wounded man and dressed the foot which was badly lacerated by the shot. According to Berryan's statement to Dr. Van Wageningen he was shot by one of his companions, but the doctor's theory is that judging from the fact that the No. 4 shot entered the foot at the top that the wound was caused by a charge from Berryan's own gun, and that he was carrying his gun with the barrel down and in raising it up he pulled the trigger unconsciously. Had he been shot by one of his companions the probability would be that the charge of shot would have entered his foot at an angle.

LOCALS OUTCLASS AMSTERDAM TEAM

At Home Court Wednesday Evening by a 33 to 15 Tally—Borgman Makes Thirteen Points in First and Five in Last Period Settling a Record for Individual Scoring.

Kingston unfolded the flag of victory again at the armory court on Wednesday evening, overwhelming the Amsterdam aggregation by a 33 to 15 count. This is the sixth straight win for the local club and it looks as if the laurels for the first half season will go to the local representatives.

The upstarters were baffled all during the contest. The excellent pass work on the part of Morgenweck clan accounted for the decisive victory. Borgman was the shining light, scoring thirteen points in the opening session and five points in the last half. Borgman seems to be picking up steam lately, so much so that saddling will not be effective. Flying tackles would be a good way to stop his progress. Knoblauch held his bionic opponent in the scoring columns to a row of zeros, while he himself was credited with five markers. The brilliant defense work set up by the local players is explained in the box score. M. Huata took the left guard position, replacing C. Powers during the closing minutes of the game.

Knoblauch again started the scoring. Getting the tap at center and receiving the pass from C. Powers, which came across the court like a shot out of a gun he ambled up to the basket and buried the pill. The Amsterdam squad was outclassed from start to finish, it being just a case of putting in time on the part of the home club. Stewart and Kennedy, the much heralded scoring guards, were lost and could not do anything during the opening period to sink two from the court and two from the free gun line, a total of six points. Borgman did doubly as good and one better. He made five from the floor and three from the fifteen foot mark, a total of thirteen points, breaking all individual scoring records for the season. The remainder of the local outfit caged the sum of eight points making a grand total of twenty-one.

Referee Davey used the whistle frequently and apparently called all the fouls he saw committed. Amsterdam was guilty ten times, Kingston made good but three. Kingston was found to be in error thirteen times. The upstarters who surely must have had an off night dropped in two. Kingston was given very little trouble during this period and scored almost at will. Amsterdam played hard and almost fought in their attempt to stop the avalanche of markers the locals were flinging.

There was less interest in the last half as the Morgenweck outfit had a big lead to start with and surely they were not going to let the upstarters overcome it. Amsterdam was more fortunate in this period scoring nine points, two from the floor and five from the complimentary line. Kingston registered twelve points, five from the play ground and two from the penalty line. Borgman added five points to his account making a total for the evening of eighteen points. He also set a record for the individual scoring for an evening's work. Benny last year when the season opened set a record that was never in danger. He scored twenty-two points at the local armory court against Cohoes.

During this nighttime period the local ball bouncers gave an exhibition of handling the ball and the twenty minutes saw Kingston in possession of the pill passing it back and forth. The final tabulation was Kingston in front of a 33 to 15 score. The usual dancing was enjoyed following the contest, music being furnished by Balfe's orchestra.

Friday evening the local team will travel to Cohoes to play the visiting aggregation. This will be one of the locals hardest games of this first half season. The court and crowd make the up river city the hardest in the circuit to play at.

FIVE TEAMS IN "Y" BASKETBALL

Room for 250 at Football Banquet—
Tad Jones or Aldrich to Speak—
Dr. Nelson Shows That Brave Men As Well As Cowards, Pray.

The members of the H-Y Club met Wednesday evening. Plans for the basketball league are being completed. Next week there will be several "scrub" games. November 29, the first of the league games will be played, the players being announced before the game. There will be four teams from the Student A and one from the employed boys. The football banquet will be held on December 8, in the gymnasium of the "Y," and will be open for boys of the high school. In order to put the thing across, the committee must sell two hundred tickets. There will be room for two hundred and fifty fellows. Either a four or a five course dinner will be served, one of the country's leading sport writers will talk, either Tad Jones, coach at Yale, or Aldrich, last year's captain of the Ella, will be there, and entertainment will be furnished by one of the best known entertainers in New York city. A nominal fee will be charged for the tickets. Members of the K. H. S. football squad will be the guests of the evening.

Mr. Hall announced that Arthur Greenly, who was scheduled to speak here Wednesday night, was ill, and that he had called upon his "stand-by," Dr. Nelson, to give a talk in place of the scheduled one. Dr. Nelson is pastor of the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer.

The subject of the address was "Prayer." Most young people and some older ones think of prayer as something effeminate or child-like, as a sign of lack of courage. In direct rebuke of such a statement, Dr. Nelson told of the famous Gordon leader of the Gordon Highlanders, one of the most manly and courageous of men in history. He was ready to take part in the most dangerous of frays, risked his life time and again, was known to men as one who could never be justly called cowardly in the least degree. Every day that man knelt in prayer. The man of courage is the man who is not afraid to come in contact with his God. There is nothing weak about prayer.

In time of trouble, in times of great sorrow, in times of great joy, men become extremely religious. Then they are not ashamed of their Master, they are not ashamed to speak to Him nor to admit that they pray. Prayer under such influence is not true prayer. Absolute deliverance to God under normal conditions is the true prayer. If one is to really pray he shuts out all the rest of the world from him and resigns himself in the simple faith of a child to a direct talk with his God.

Mr. Hall commented on the talk just given by calling to the attention of the boys the fact that this is "Prayer Week" in the Y. M. C. A. all over the country. The "Y" was founded by Sir George Williams in England as an institution of prayer. The organization grew, taking in other phases of religious and social work, until it is now the foremost organization of such a kind in the world. The purpose of the "Y" seems to have changed in the minds of many people; some consider it a gymnasium, some a pool room, others a Bible class, and so this one week is set aside to bring back for once the real purpose of and the real meaning of the words "Young Men's Christian Association." Mr. Hall said that he hoped the fellows had taken to heart the talk just given, that every boy would form the habit of prayer if he has not already done so, and if he has that he will keep it up.
